

Concept: I mentioned to Linda during a conversation about wanting to learn archery. Linda offered to have me connect with her daughter - who is into archery. Jessica and Kyle arrange to meet at _____ archery range.

Jessica teaches Kyle the basics and the two engage in a few short topic discussions. This is a slightly scripted and edited concept with background noises and additional audio that will be included to replicate the experience that actually happens at a range.

Intro:

- Kyle: "Anne, you see that - bows and arrows - yeah!"
- Kyle: "Yep, like on Wii but real life."
- Jessica: "<Statement about Wii archery to break the ice....">
- Kyle: "Jessica?"
- Kyle: "It is so nice to meet you. Your Mom speaks the world of you and I am excited for our lesson today!"
- Kyle: "Anne has a book and some toys, she should be fine sitting back over here. She is pretty much always with me?"
- Kyle: "Do you prefer Jessica, or another name like Jess?"
- Kyle: "I was talking with your Mom and she mentioned that you have a background in archery. I have been curious about it. I told her and she offered to hook us up. I jumped at the chance!"
- Kyle: "I am excited to get started."

Safety Brief:

- Jessica: "Let's talk safety."
- Kyle: "Safety first. I am trying to instill that in Anne."
- Kyle: "So, I see all of this protective gear."
- Kyle: "That's what, an arm guard, glove, and what is this? It almost looks like a sling of some kind?"
- Kyle: "Arrow! Cool!"
- Jessica: "Remember to keep the arrow pointed down range at all times."
- Kyle: "I have a fun range story for you someday over coffee, from when I was in the police academy. I shot the roof beams at the range at 32nd Street Naval Base in San Diego once during a rapid fire event. By the way, I did graduate - and I served in the auxiliary security forces while I was stationed there"
- Kyle: "Have you ever been involved in any serious archery accidents?"
- Kyle: "I know your Uncle used to do some unsafe things. How much of "what not to do" did you learn from him?"

Harry and Jess

- Kyle: "I think he is a pretty fascinating person."..."Hell, your entire family is."
- Kyle: "Do you mind if I ask you some questions about Harry and your family while we are doing our lesson?"
- Kyle: "You two got into some fun from what I have learned?"

- Kyle: "Do you have a favorite - "We are in so much trouble" story about you and him?"
- Kyle: "What is your earliest memory of your Uncle?"
- Kyle: "I have to know, did you have any special nicknames for Harry?"
- Kyle: "Did he have any special nicknames for you?"
- Kyle: "Sorry, I will try to not keep us too far off track. I can sometimes get a little manic when talking - the joys of being Bi-Polar 1 (Severe)."
- Kyle: "Beside making sure you are right minded, do you have any other safety recommendations?"

Equipment Introduction: <sound of archery equipment moving>

- Jessica: <statement about taking a look at the equipment>
- Kyle: "Awesome! I have to warn you I know way less than I actually let on."
- Kyle: "I actually own a cheap little bow and arrow but I haven't really messed with it too much. I think I shot it in my basement once."
- Kyle: "I hurt my shoulder a few years back when my bike's chain snapped and kind of just let it sit aside."
- Kyle: "Tore my AC joint and it never really healed properly. So I am so curious to see how this goes today."
- Kyle: "But, I do believe this is the bow."
- Kyle: "I have seen different types of bows. What are the differences and is there a type of bow that you would recommend for beginners?"
- Kyle: "Cool, and this is obviously an arrow."..."And we know to keep these pointed down range."
- Kyle: "What are these?"
- Jessica: <comment about quiver, target face, and bow stand>
- Kyle: "So, there is some gear and equipment involved with archery"

Transition:

- Kyle: "Speaking of baggage, your Uncle"
- Jessica: <hopefully laughs>
- Kyle: "haha... but seriously, I am guessing you learned a lot from Harry?"
- Kyle: "What are some of the things you most fondly remember learning from him?"
- Kyle: "What is your favorite skill you have taken away from your time with him?"

Stance & Posture:

- Kyle: "I digress. We have a lesson haha."
- Jessica: <statement about stance and posture, balance, and alignment>
- Kyle: "Ok, so my feet-shoulder width and perpendicular to the target."
- Kyle: "Relax my shoulders and distribute my weight evenly - check."
- Kyle: "Then hips and shoulders square to the target?"
- Kyle: "How's that look?"
- Kyle: "Now, if only I had a bow hahaha."

Transition:

- Kyle: "Sorry, something jumped into my head."
- Kyle: "Your Mom told me to ask you about learning to ride a motorcycle."
- Kyle: "Your Uncle taught you how to ride, right?"
- Kyle: "She wouldn't tell me the details but she mentioned you had a funny story about it but said you had to tell me?"
- Kyle: "I am curious. In this regard, about Harry the mentor... Harry the teacher... Harry the guide... Harry the Uncle who cared enough... As he taught you new things, what was it like to learn from him?"

Nocking the Arrow:

- Jessica: "Let's get you set up to "nock the arrow."
- Kyle: "Ummm.... Sorry, what is a nock?"
- Kyle: "Ah... Ok."
- Jessica: "So, go ahead and place the arrow on the rest here."
- Kyle: "Ok."
- Jessica: "Now, clip the nock onto the string at the nocking point."
- Kyle: "Like this?"
- Jessica: "Yep, and ensure the fletching faces away from the bow. The fletching is that odd-colored vane."
- Kyle: "Fletching, more jargon to learn, haha."
- Kyle: "Ok, does that look about right?"
- Kyle: "By the way, as a retired but still certified talent development specialist, I will say that you are an excellent teacher."

Transition:

- Kyle: "Speaking of that... Teaching, you shared a story about him teaching you to ride a dirtbike. I have a story that I learned about him with regards to teaching another young lady to ride a dirtbike - it is kind of epic and I am pretty sure you haven't heard it."
- Kyle: "She will remain nameless but if I remember correctly, she showed up to learn to ride with Harry - she was wearing flip flops. Something about a curb, bush, and a lesson learned."
- Kyle: "I will say that she has represented Team USA in BMX many times. And I will leave it at that."

Drawing the Bow:

- Kyle: "Alright, sorry. So... What's next?"
- Jessica: "Let's draw the bow."
- Kyle: "Alright, so just pull back and aim?"
- Kyle: "This is a bit tight on my shoulder but it should be ok."
- Jessica: "Loosen up your grip a bit on the riser."...<insight as to why?>
- Kyle: "Like this?"
- Jessica: "When you draw, use your back muscles, not your shoulders."
- Kyle: "That's interesting, I always thought it was a shoulder strength game."
- Jessica: <insight>

- Jessica: "Also, find a consistent anchor point."..."For instance, the corner of your mouth, chin, or cheekbone."
- Kyle: "That makes total sense."

Transition:

- Kyle: "Speaking of sense..."
- Kyle: "I want to ask for your insight into a lack of common sense on your uncle's part that got a lot of attention before he passed."..."It's the big one in many people's opinions."..."I have a feeling you know what I am talking about."
- Jessica: "The elbow incident."
- Kyle: "Yeah. Did the incident create a reason for you to change your mind about how you feel about Harry?"
- Kyle: "Is there any insight you don't mind sharing with regards to how the elbow incident affected him personally, and maybe how that affected you and your family?"
- Kyle: "I appreciate you sharing that."

Aiming:

- Kyle: "Ok, what is next? I guess aiming?"
- Kyle: "Are there any recommendations you have for aiming?"
- Jessica: "Focus on the target, align the arrow naturally. Stay calm and steady throughout the release."
- Kyle: "Oh boy. Ok. I think the calm part is going to be my downfall."..."But hoorah."

Transition:

- Kyle: "Speaking of recommendations.... Are there any favorite stories you have about Harry growing up?" "Your grandma said that your Mom and him used to have fun - for a nice way of putting it."
- Kyle: "I am curious, are there or were there any often repeated stories that the family routinely shares about him when you get together?"

Release & Follow-Through:

- Kyle: "Ok, so here goes."
- Kyle: "I am just going to run through the checklist... I have my stance and posture."
- Kyle: "Now I nock the arrow."
- Kyle: "Draw back - don't griip to tight."
- Kyle: "That's going to be tough to remember. But roger."
- Kyle: "Take a breath Kyle"... <breath> <release sound><sound of the arrow hitting the target."
- Kyle: "Holly crap! Look at that!"
- Kyle: "Man, that was fun!"
- Kyle: "Oh... Before I forget, I have a couple other questions related to his commitment to BMX."

Transition:

- Kyle: "I have heard some of your family's take on Harry's commitment to the sport of cycling really. Especially with regards to "The Boy" letter that your Grandma shared with me."
- Kyle: "What is your take on how Harry's commitment to BMX affected your relationship - good or bad?"
- Kyle: "Do you, or did you, need to find closure with relation to his commitment to the sport?"
- Kyle: "Is there anything you did need, in order to find closure regarding his death? Or still do?"

Moving Forward:

- Kyle: "As I move forward with my archery practice, what tips should I walk away with?"

"One" ...:

- Kyle: "So, I like to play this game called One Word. Are you down?"
- Kyle: "Ok, One word - for however you want to describe your uncle, as your uncle - not Harry Leary the BMX legend?"
- Kyle: "With the insight into his career that you do have, what is one word for your uncle, Harry Leary - the BMX legend?"
- Kyle: "Ok. I came up with a new game."
- Kyle: "Most Uncles and Nieces or Nephews have a secret."
- Kyle: "Would you be willing to share one secret you shared with your uncle?"

Transition to conclusion:

- Kyle: "Speaking of secrets... Between you and I, what is the secret to your archery success?"

Conclusion:

- Kyle: "That was a great lesson! Thank you!"
- Kyle: "Anne, what did you think?"
- Kyle: "She has spoken."
- Kyle: "I guess I need to practice a bit more."
- Kyle: "I appreciate your time, I would love to chat more in the future if you are down?"
- Kyle: "Take care."